OBJECTIVE OF THE MASTER

The Master’s Degree in Management of the Organisations and Social Doctrine of the Church is an absolute novelty among Italian universities that provides knowledge, experience and tools for planning and managing community resources and needs in a socially and economically appropriate way from the perspective of the common good.

The profound economic, technological, political and cultural changes in present-day society require a re-thinking of traditional economic and business strategies and policies. The major challenge of the contemporary economic and social system is to recreate intelligence, efficiency, innovation and solidarity. In this context, a new focus on teaching the Social Doctrine of the Church can provide reflection on the modern society, in which we live.

The Master delves into the teaching and principles of the Social Doctrine of the Church as a guideline for addressing the social and political problems of the human condition human beings. It aims at providing knowledge, fundamental tools and best practices in order to build a new vision of the work carried out by complex organisations, with particular reference to firms and public administrations; in doing so, the Master contributes to give an ethical and relational sense to the concept of management for a sustainable and authentic development of both economy and society.

Master’s students will develop interdisciplinary skills that combine technical-specialist knowledge with ethics and moral values. In particular, by approaching cultures, contexts, and positive models, the development of entrepreneurial, managerial and leadership skills, permeated by values of listening, diversity, justice, solidarity, responsibility, courage and above all gratuitousness, will be promoted.

Currently, the Scientific Board of the Master is composed of 40 people.
